Laurel, Aquino Cut Ties

He Says He Was Excluded From Her Inner Circle

By Seth Mydans

Sine York Times Service MANILA - Vice President Salvador H. Laurel broke politically with President Corazon C. Aquino on Wednesday, saying his resigna-tion as foreign secretary, tendered last week, was final.

Mr. Laurel, who remains vice president, complained that since she became president Mrs. Aquino had excluded him from her inner

He also said he had "basic, fundamental differences of opinion" with her, primarily regarding her program to fight the Communist surgency in the Philippines. Mr. Laurel's public break with the president came after months of dissatisfaction, during which he was reported to have been talking with with the opposition leader, Juan Ponce Enrile, whose friends in the military have been responsible for a series of coup attempts.

Both men denied that they were forming an alliance, but Mr. Enrile said Mr. Laurel would be welcome in the opposition.

Advisers to the president said she had been disturbed by Mr. Laurel's politicking in the military since the latest coup attempt, Local newspapers had carried reports from the palace recently that she might be planning to dismiss him.

The president, apparently forced into an announcement by Mr. Laurel's statement, accepted his resignation and said she also was replacing Finance Secretary Jaime V. Ongpin, a controversial figure for what is seen as his acquiescence to foreign creditor banks.

A presidential aide said, however, that Mr. Ongpin was removed for personal rather than policy reasons. There was on immediate indication of any change in the government's policy of honoring its $26 billion foreign debt. Mrs. Aquino said further onnonncements would follow soon as she completed a government reorganization following the courtesy resignations last week of her entire

she would announce all cabinet Shipping officials who monitor changes together, but her spokesman, Teodoro Benigno, said Wednesday that more changes would be announced Thursday. In a television address after Mr.

Laurel's announcement, the president desended her counterinsurgency policy, saying she fully supported the military and had urged it to fight the Communist rebels aggressively.

The president said she had nominated Vicente Jayme, secretary of public works and highways, to replace Mr. Ongpin and named Ma-nuel T. Yan, a retired general, as acting foreign secretary.

She also accepted the resignations of the commissioners of customs and immigration.

Mr. Laurel, who has not hidden his presidential ambitions, asserted that Mrs. Aquino had reneged on a pre-election promise to let him run the country.

His criticisms of the president appeared to be a bid for the support of the military. He made eight recommendations to the president, all echoing military demands. "It was a forced marriage, and now it is a separation," Senator Orlando Mercado, a member of

Mr. Laurel's political party who is also backed by Mrs. Aquino, said of the Aquino-Laurel alliance.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia - The bonds that hold Malaysia's multiracial coalition government together are weakening contributing to a serious upsurge of tension between the main ethnic groups in the country, according to politicians, diplomats and other analysis here.

In recent interviews and public comments, they have warned of the danger of polarization between Malays, who make up about half the population of 16 million, and people of Chinese and Indian descent, the largest minorities.
"There's no doubt race relations are worsening."

said Lim Kit Siang, leader of the Democratic Action Party, the main opposition group in Parliament. His party espouses multiracialism but draws most of its support from Chinese voters.

Diplomats and other observers said mutual tolerance and trust between the main ethnic groups were being strained by an increasing tendency for grievances over such divisive issues as religion, language, education and culture to be aired publicly and exploited for partisan purposes by members of government and opposition parties alike.

They said one of the most alarming aspects of this ferment was evidence of racial intolerance among young people in schools, universities and the youth vings of major Malay, Chinese and Indian parties. Kang Chin Seng, publicity chief for the Gerakan party, wrote in a letter to the press last week that he was shocked to find that a large proportion of racial incidents have occurred in schools. His party is one of 13 in the National Front which forms the federal government and nearly all state administrations. Parties in the front represent the main ethnic groups in Malaysia. National Organization, known as UMNO, asked the

Recently the youth wing of the United Malays

UMNO, with 83 of the 177 seats in Parliament, is the dominant partner in the National Front.

Waad Mansur, chairman of the cultural burean of UMNO's youth wing, asserted that the wording of the advertisement — "Visit Malaysia Fest 1987 to celebrate many cultures, races and heritages" - was in conflict with official policy on national culture. Referring to the status of Malays as the largest indigenous community in Malaysia, and to Malay as the national language, he said the advertisement should have read: "One race, one culture and a varied heritage."

Prime Minister Mahathir bin Mohamad, the president of UMNO, has called several times for revened regular meetings of National Front leaders at federal, state and divisional levels so that sensitive issues could be discussed in private and compromises worked out.

They said Mr. Mahathir and his followers in UMNO appeared preoccupied with neutralizing their opponents in the party and consolidating their base of Malay support.

A split occurred in UMNO when Mr. Mahathir narrowly beat off a challenge in April from Raza-leigh Hamzah, then trade and industry minister, in party elections. Mr. Razaleigh, and a number of other members of Mr. Mahathir's government who opposed his leadership, resigned or were dismissed shortly thereafter.

The purge of dissidents went down to divisional and branch levels of the party. Both sides are still trying to appear to the Malays to be the most ardent protectors and promoters of Malay interests," said Mohammed Sopiee, a leading newspaper columnist. Several bankers and economists said the recession in Malaysia in 1985 and 1986 had increased unemployment and thus competition for jobs among Ma-lays, Chinese and Indians.

They said that this had fanned racial tension, but noted that if the improvement in economic growth See RACE, Page 6

Discreet Use of Flattery Hurts Biden

By Maureen Dowd New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - While Senator Joseph R. Biden Jr. functioned as the cool, crisp interrogator of Judge Robert H. Bork on Tuesday, the senator's presidential campaign was struggling away from the spotlight with a growing controversy over some of the speeches that have added to his reputation as a leading orator of the Democratic Party,

Last weekend, after a report that Mr. Biden had appropriated a British politician's speech as his own to close a debate last month, he blamed this on simple oversight: he had intended to credit Neil Kinnock, the Labor Party leader, for the moving description of Mr. Kinnock's ancestors,

But this week a number of politicians of both parties, some of them partisans of other candidates in the Democratic presidential race, have pointed out other instances in which Mr. Biden has borrowed memorable passages from others.

Mr. Biden's aides say that borrowing thoughts and plarases is common in speech-making and a way of paying homage to leaders of the past. But others say that, while taking a theme or phrase is common, the specific life experiences or particular words are usually chosen to suit the candidate himself. "It's O.K. to steal the background music. but not the lyrics," said one Democratic strategist. "It's a tempest in a teapot," said Mr. Bidea's press aide, Larry Rasky, who suggested that a rival Democratic campaign, which he did not identify, was trying "to spin a story that will hurt our campaign while we are trying to lead the fight on

They're putting their own interests above the interests of the Democratic Party," Mr. Rasky

Sometimes only a phrase is involved. In a speech to the California State Democratic Convention on Feb. 3, Mr. Biden said that "each generation of Americans has been summoned" to a test of devotion to democracy; the same phrase was used about national loyalty by John F. Kennedy in his presidential inaugural address in 1961. Mr. Biden has used longer passages nearly ver-

BAGHDAD — With no public sign of a breakthrough, the United Nations secretary-general, Javier Pèrez de Cuellar, has ended an effort in still the war between Iran and Iraq, leaving Iraq to face a conundrum that some say is of its own creation. Mukhtar said. By the most optimistic account, offered by a UN official on Monday night, Iran has been softening its language and during the talks in Tehran had been prepared to use such a previously taboo word as "cease-fire." The official suggested that the change may have represented "some movement." But, he acknowledged, it may not be enough for a cease-fire.

In Iraq, such interpretations meet only with cynicism. "When the Iranians are fac-ing a dead end," said Mr. Mukhtar, "they begin to adopt suggestions that they may be moderate. But when they reach the point they have tried to reach, they abandon moderation and return to fanaticism."

The Iraqis, said one Western envoy, want to be sure that they are not locked in in any kind of unilateral cease-fire by the diplomatie process."

They have to keep up the air war against Iranian shipping, he added, "and they have to make their own-limited attacks on the ground." Iraq's air power is generally held to be its only clear-cut edge over the numerically superior Iranians.

At the same time, diplomats said, Baghdad needs allies, such as the United States, to maintain pressure for an arms embargo against Tehran to complement a war effort seen as unlikely to bring a military victory.

Domestic Tranquillity for Constitution's 200th? Try Big Bash

By William K. Stevens

PHILADELPHIA — It's Constitution Week, and

Philadelphia, the city where the original document was signed, is ready for the party of its life. Since January the nation's observance of the Con-stitution's bicentennial — accented by a series of dramatic political events in Washington — has tended toward the serious, the intellectual, sometimes the contentious. Philadelphia, in leading the national celebration, has kept the tone festive but restrained. On Thursday the restraints come off. Hundreds of thousands of celebrators, perhaps as many as a million, depending on the weather, are expected in the city for a daylong extravaganza marking the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution. It will begin with a four-hour nationally televised parade and end with a nighttime entertainment gala, which also will be nationally televised. More than 15,000 people are to take part in the parade, part of which will recreate the Grand Federal Procession that honored the Constitution's ratification in 1788.

outside Independence Hall. And at 4 P.M. the moment of the Constitution's signing, former Chief Justice Warren E. Burger is to ring a reproduction of the Liberty Bell, signaling other bells to chime around the country and at U.S. installations around the world.

Cities and towns throughout the country will join the celebration. In New York, church bells will toll, and the public is being encouraged to join a group of distinguished Americans and celebrities in reading

At Montpelier, Virginia, the birthplace of James Madison, a festival of dance and theater is planned for Thursday and Friday, Charleston, South Carolina, plans concerts, fireworks, lectures and church

In a double observance that also honors the Northwest Ordinance of 1787, a time capsule will be buried at Marietta, Ohio, the first permanent settlement in the Northwest Territory. The Northwest Ordinance prohibited slavery in what is now Ohio, ing an elaborate governmental structure there, it paved the way for a continental nation to develop. The serious and the contentious are not about to be banished, however. For instance, the Bicentennial Citizen Center, a group set op by Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, has tried unsuccessfully to have a float or marching unit included in the parade that would celebrate protest and dissent in American

"Since protest is responsible for all of the constitu-tional advances of the last 100 years, we thought it was important that this oversight be compensated for," said Jason Atkins, director of the center.

Officials of We the People 200, the Philadelphia group organizing the Constitution Day celebration, maintained that the theme already was reflected in the parade and that the Nader group, had it so desired, could have been represented in what is called the "Parade of America's People," a section of the procession that includes many kinds of citizens' organizations, including protest groups.

Some advocacy groups, such as the environmen-talist Sierra Club and the Pledge of Resistance, which opposes U.S. involvement in Central Ameri-ca, are to be represented. Mr. Atkins called this 'calculated tokenism for protesters' and predicted that the focus of the activities on Thursday will be in

A Pattern of Pretense

President Reagan continues to follow a destructive pattern on Central American peace. A month ago be and his administration welcomed the Guatemala peace plan endorsed by Central America's five presidents. Then for weeks his top aides sniped at it anonymously. Now the president is so hostile to the plan that he concurs in dismissing it as fatally flawed.

The Guatemala plan, whatever its weaknesses, is not fatally flawed. A Reagan administration policy that simply criticizes, and does not press for remedies, is. Mr. Reagan will surely forfeit his waning credibility and abdicate responsibility unless be breaks his pattern of pretense.

The pattern goes back years. In a message to Congress in 1983, Mr. Reagan spoke of the urgent need to use the "resources of diplomacy" in dealing with the the Sandinist regime. "We do not seek its overthrow." ne said. "Our interest is to ensure that it does not infect its neighbors through export of subversion and violence

A few months later the Contadora mediators — Venezuela, Colombia, Mexico and Panama - put forth a draft plan directed to precisely that objective. It was, the State Department said, a "positive step." But this praise was joined to a devastating list of shortcomings: Why was nothing done to provide for free elections? What about verification? Contadora perished, as did other diplomatic initiatives. After Democrats took control of Conoress and the Iran-contra affair exploded. the White House again declared that Mr. Reagan was developing a diplomatic track. Early last month be claimed he was in

"general agreement" with a peace effort pushed by Costa Rica. He took the next step of seeking improvements in the plan by endorsing an initiative by House Speaker Jim Wright. The Wright plan required completion of negotiations by Sept. 30, when the $100 million voted for the contras expires. "It's not just a ploy; it's a genuine effort," Secretary of State George Shultz insisted. Then came the Guatemala approach, calling for a cease-fire by Nov. 7 followed by steps to pluralism in Nicaragua. Mr. Reagan said: "I welcome this commitment to peace and democracy by the five Central American presidents ... The agreement makes clear there is much work to be done by the parties involved. The United States will be as helpful as possible consistent with our interests and the interests of the Nicaraguan resistance ... We will study the agreement carefully with an eye to what the U.S. can contribute to the search for freedom and peace." How, in a month, could the president go from that to "fatally flawed"? No one will believe he really wants peace in Central America unless be speaks with one voice.

Richard Godwin has resigned as Penta-gon weapons czar, saying he was not given the backing he needed to bring sweet reason to the acquisition process, the job for which he was hired a year ago. The depressing likelihood is that too much will be made out of the resignation on all sides. Those who continue to think that the answers to the Pentagon's procurement problems lie in its table of organization will say, with reason, that his throat was cut by the very networks his job was created to supplant. The opposing school will say, perhaps also rightly, that the main fault lay not with the system but with him — that the former Bechtel Group executive, too used to having his own way, lacked the finesse this job required.

The real problem lay in relying on a reorganization plan to achieve a substantive result. The vast and complex weapons acquisition process will never be efficient; too many conflicting demands are put on it. Its shifting foundation is the Threat, which continually changes with perceptions. Huge theological disputes develop about which threats are the most serious, what weapons should be built to meet them, how many different roles each weapon should have.

These half metaphysical, half earthy inter-and intra-service debates are complicated by the lack of any fully realistic way to test most of the doctrines and weapons. Most of them are built precisely so that they will never have to be used. The system is riddled with both conflicts of interest and adversarial relationships; careers and profits both depend on it. Atop all these are what might be called managerial questions. In developing a weapon, do you try to move as fast as you can, or as cautiously? Where do you come out in the daily trade-offs between sophistication and simplicity? Would you rather run a few production lines at optimum rates or a lot of lines at once but inefficiently? The alluring idea of reorganization is that if only you could centralize this welter of decisions, you could achieve greater order, but that is an illusion.

First, there is no agreement on what greater order consists of; if there were, the disorder would likely not exist. Some critics define reform as stripping weapons of gold plate, but others see it as hauling the auditors out of the defense plants and stripping the procurement process of red tape. Second, and more important, these decisions are in a sense already centralized; in the defense secretary. They are policy decisions, perhaps the most important he is called upon to make. He cannot delegate them. He has no shortage of subordinates now — the deputy secretary, the service secretaries. OPINION

Let the Bicentennial Celebration Be Proud

P HILADELPHIA — The delegates finished their work 200 years ago today. In just a few thousand words they framed a structure of government strong enough, and flexible enough, to survive the social and economic and scientific revolutions of these last two centuries.

The birthday of the American Constitution is an occasion for national pride without cynicism, without apology. For any human institu-tion to last as long as 200 years is remarkable. That America's fundamental law survives, and keeps Americans in freedom and prosperity, may be called a secular miracle.

But there is a strange thing. At this time of national celebration a good many Americans sound gloomy about their country's prospects. In London, The Economist has on its cover this week a frowning Statue of Liberty. The headline continue to brandish the Soviet Menace, turning toward market economics, and so to a of human liberty are proving hard to resist too.

Americans should take pride in the appeal of limited state power, guaranteed individual freedoms. Instead, some who call themselves conser-

Voices of the American right are on the attack against the whole system of checks and balances. They want the president to have absolute power in foreign policy, for example. If Congress says no to aiding the Nicaragnan contras, the president should ignore it and spend the money.

Or consider the right-wing attack on the law providing for special prosecutors, appointed by the courts, to investigate charges of misconduct in the executive branch. That is unconstitutional, the critics say: The president must control the investigation of his own people's wrongdoing. They treat the sensible idea of a special prosecutor as if it

The American right is obsessed these days by ch must not be allowed to obstruct the perfect wisdom of presidents. As a matter of history, all Of course it is in theory "undemocratic" for that is extraordinary. Conservatives used to be judges to enforce a 200-year-old Constitution sensitive to the dangers of concentrated power. The conservative men who met in Philadelphia in 1787 took care to divide power in order to prevent tyranny. Conservatives in the 1930s warned about America has a president of the right now, and

'conservative" has changed its meaning.

There is a startling change in attitude, too, toward the role of courts in enforcing the Constitution. Modern political conservatives say the role is undemocratic. They say judges must take the narrowest possible view of their function and must read the Constitution to limit its guarantees to the "original intention" of the framers. But if the Constitution's great phrases are to have any concrete meaning, they must be interpreted again and again. As Chief Justice William Rehnquist says in his new book on the Supreme Court, "It is perfectly evident that those who drafted the Constitution in Philadelphia in to avoid a sort of temporal parochialism." America's one great contribution to political

Now Comes The Crunch In the Gulf

By Jim Hoagland

P ARIS — The armada that the United States has concentrated on the Gulf has served a modest but useful purpose. It has persuaded friends and adversaries abroad that the Reagan administration is still in business To note this is to thank heaven for small favors, in the hope of encourage.

ing more and larger blessings. Now comes the hard part. Having demonstrated that it can still wield power despite Irangate, the Reagan presidency must show that it can wield power effectively. The original mishaps and accidental nature of U.S. policy in the Gulf did not encourage confidence on this score.
U.S. warships have served as a kind of policy bludgeon, focusing the attention not only of fran but also of America's European allies, the Soviet Union and the perpetually apprehensive Arab states of the Gulf on U.S. power. But these are temporary and fragile gains. It would be dangerous to mistake them for enduring cooperation or acquiescence. The reality is that the United States is more alone in the Gulf than it appears.

Five European countries have finally agreed to send their own warships to the Gulf area, but only because of intense diplomatic pressure from Washington. The pressure has worked, but officials in Britan, France, the Netherlands, Belginm and Italy now wonder how America will extricate itself, and them, from the Iran-Iraq crossiire. The Europeans are practicing their own version of a "flexible response" strategy on the United States in the Gulf. They are being as vague about how they would react to military escalation there as the United States is about its eventual nuclear response to a Soviet invasion of Europe. The Europeans have insistently kept their ships under national com-mand, remaining independent of U.S. logistical support and operational decisions. Obviously they do not want a repeat of the disaster of four years ago, when they joined the Reagan administration as peacekeepers in Lebanon. "It simply wasn't worth continuing to fight the United States on this," said a senior official in one of the five governments, Added an adviser to another leader, who agreed reluctantly to go along with the American request not only to send ships but to publicize the intention to do so: "So far so good. But how long do we have to stay out there? What is it that will get the Americans out? We don't get answers when we ask Washington this." West Germany and Japan have de-clined to associate themselves with the American effort in the Gulf. There is mounting concern in allied capitals that Bonn is seeking a separate peace with Tehran, in order to get Iranian help in freeing the remain German hostage in Beirut and to protect a privileged trading position in Iran. West Germany thus joins the Soviet Union and China as question marks in the United Nations Security Council vote on mandatory sanctions against Iran, something the United States will seek now that the UN effort to get a Gulf cease-fire has failed." The Soviets have been made aware that Washington sees the vote as a test of the new "pragmatism" that Moscow has been advertising in its Middle East policies. A cooperative attitude on the Gulf in the UN vote would be an element in fashioning a successful summit meeting later this year.

What is it that will get the Americans out?"

More fundamental to the White House calculation must be a sense that the Soviets see the UN process as the best way to reduce the troubling American military buildup, which is precisely the circumstance that Gorbachev's Middle Eastern initiatives aim to prevent," as the Israeli scholar Galia Golan notes in the current issue of Foreign Affairs magazine.

If this analysis is correct, the Soviets will not try to broker a Tashkent solution to the Iran-Iraq war on their own. Nor will they maneuver to dig the United States deeper into a dangerous pit of its own making.

Instead, they would cash in the the Gulf in the interests of the larger, the Grill in the interests of the larger, emerging objective of supplying the United States with reasons to limit or reduce its military presence abroad. Such supply-side diplomacy b; the Russians carries long-term risks for American strategy. But the White House has little choice but to come to a clear understanding with the Soviets on the next steps in the Gulf. Perhaps the best thing that can be said for U.S. policy at this stage is that it has forced the same realization on Moscow.

we in Finland have no inside knowledge of the Kremlin's workings. But with a few centuries of practice in the art of rolling with the ebb and flow of Russian power, we may have developed an inner ear for the obscure signals that emanate from Moscow. As so often in the past, literature has lifted a corner of the curtain behind which the Soviet debate is taking place. A new historical play by Mikhail Shatrov, describing the first severe crisis of the young Soviet state in the winter of 1917-18, is replete with allusions to current issues. Mr. Shatrov recalls that the Soviet-German peace negotiations in Brest-Litovsk were the subject of deep dif-ferences among Bolsbevik leaders. Several argued that to give in to German demands would mean betraying the revolution. But Lenin insisted that the peace treaty must be signed

Soviet policy that took place during the 20 years of Leonid Brezhnev's he said. "Either a breathing spell or the end of the revolution, there is no other alternative." In the end Lenin won, but with only seven votes behind him and four against. (There were also four abstentions.)

What we are supposed to learn from Mr. Shatrov's play is not, as some have suggested, that General Secretary Gorbachey is about to make a proposal to unify Germany. Even the slightest hint of readiness by him to abandon East Germany could undermine stability in all of Eastern Europe. I do not think Mr. Gorbachev intends to preside over the dissolution of the Soviet empire.

The message is more general. It is that Mr. Gorbachev is following in Lenin's footsteps in making the tough decisions imposed by the prevailing realities of power in order to save the Soviet Union from further decline and gain time for socialism to recover its strength; and that like Lenin be is facing stiff opposition. The tough decisions Mr. Gorbachev is making are designed to reverse the releatless militarization of rule. The ideological challenge of the Prague Spring in 1968 was met with tanks; Mao's China was threatened with a pre-emptive nuclear strike; America was goaded into rearming by the vast expansion of Soviet military influence in Asia and Africa; Japan was alienated by the stationing of Soviet troops on the disputed islands off Hokkaido; Western Europe was frightened by the deployment of the SS-20 missiles; finally, the invasion of Alghanistan turned most of the Islamic world against Moscow. At each critical point Mr. Brezhnev seems to have listened to His Marshal's Voice. No wonder he was elevated shortly before his death to the honorary rank of Soviet marshal. Mr. Gorbachev has reduced the influence of the military establishment in decision making. A missile agreement and a summit meeting with Ronald Reagan would further enhance his prestige and strengthen his band in pursuit of his declared goal of "stable and predictable" rela-

beyond arms control toward some degree of cooperation with the United States. He must do this to reduce the risks of a superpower confrontation in what could be called "the soft underbelly" of the Soviet Union from the eastern shores of the Mediterranean to the Indian subcontinent, an area riddled with conflict. Such cooperation is not without precedent. A rudimentary form of oint crisis management evolved in the late 1960s. In 1967 the two powers agreed on the outline of a comprehen-sive settlement of the Middle East conflict, as embodied in UN Resolution 242. In 1968 they signed the nonproliferation treaty. In 1973 they stopped the Yom Kippur war. What brought the United States and the Soviet Union together then was a common enemy - China Soviet leaders were obsessed with "the yellow peril." Washington was preoc-cupied with the war in Vietnam and saw China as the main adversary. But this phase did not last long. Soviet-Chinese rivalry and the decline of American power in the 1970s, after the Vietnam War and the Watergate scandal, fueled Soviet expansion in the Third World, culminating in the invasion of Afghanistan - in American eyes, a bid for world domination. Today the common enemy is not so easily identifiable. Rather than any single state, it is the danger of chaos caused by the violent revolutionary currents in the Islamic world, which ultimately may undermine stability within the Soviet Union itself. The decisions Mr. Gorbachev is facing, particularly on Afghanistan, are tough indeed. We must assume that, like Lenin in 1918, be is accused by his opponents of betraying the revolution. Will he be able to prevail? Mr. Jakobson, a former Finnish am-bassador to the United Nations, writes

The French put up 64 percent of the money to develop the first Ariane, more than 62 percent for Ariane-2 and -3 and 53 percent for the bigger Ariane-4, which is to go up in January. They own 59.25 percent of Arianespace, which exploits the launcher. No other country comes close to this share. West German interests make up the next largest group of shareholders in Arianespace, 19.6 percent of the total. Italy's share is 3.6 percent and Britain's is 2.4 percent. France has driven the Ariane program forward, pleading, bribing and twisting arms to get the cooper-ation of the other West Europeans. When money could not be found elsewhere, France put it up.

France's motives are easy to understand. High technology pays.

Arianespace aims at controlling half the world satellite market, and despite the delay since the unsuc-cessful 18th launch, on May 31 last year, it already makes money. Successful high technology pro-grams also attract and hold talent; they decide whether a nation's scientific elite stays at home or emigrates to challenging jobs elsewhere. German assertion in sensitive technological areas has been inhibited since the war for political reasons a condition that is changing.

Italian regionalism and corporat-ism still limit the authority of the state. Italy is strong in craft and technological innovation but weak er in large-scale industry than the other big European powers. This again is a changing situation. French predominance in Europe's innovative technological programs has been a matter of others' defaults as well as of France's own ambitions, excessive or otherwise. The equation of forces within Europe is changing, particularly with respect to West Germany's role. It is interesting to speculate where leadership will lie in the year 2000 and after. The New York Herald quotes Dr. Wiley as declaring that it is a good thing that oysters are not noisy, for if the oyster could yell or jump, dining-rooms would rever er-ate with tragedy. Ninety percent of oysters, he says, are alive when eaten, and suffer excruciating pain when jabbed with a fork and sprinkled with condiments. "It is true that they are a low order of life, but they are live animals and have feelings. Imagine a monster coming from Mars, thinking that we humans were succulent morsels when eaten alive It would indeed be a nice sensation for us to be poked full of holes, covered with salt and pepper and Tobasco sauce."

1937: For Arms Talks

WASHINGTON - United States willingness to cooperate in an arms limitation conference was made known today [Sept. 16]. "When and if an opportunity comes to bring about a halt in the armaments race by agreement, I hope this government will be able to share in the leadership of that move," declared Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in instructions sent to all diplomatic and consular representatives. "Through every source of persuasion in every act of policy." Mr. Hull added, "this government is exerting itself in an effort to safeguard against having an armsments race develop into a catastrophic war ... I think maintenance of 2 most zealous and insistent emphasis upon economic questions may serve to bring nearer the day when the armaments race can be halted."

Cynical or Merely Ignorant, But Absurd in Either Case By George F. Will WASHINGTON — Historian Part of the answer, she suggests, is the uncritical political echo of "the assessment of his law review articles

Last Sunday several newspapers carnied ads by the National Abortion Rights Action League, which began its calls "the professoriate," which she dessault on Robert Bork like this: "You fines as "a small but influential corps of wouldn't vote for a politician who threatened to wipe out every advance women have made in the 20th century. Yet your senators are poised to cast a vote that could do just that."

Auto-intoxication is an occupational hazard of those who work at manufacturing hysteria, and paranoiacs are not easily embarrassed, but really: "every advance women have made ..."?

That sentiment should be preserved in amber and sent to the Smithsonian. It is a perfect caricature of the liberal notion that all goods issue from government. Indeed, it implies that all progress for women has come from, and can be undone by, the judiciary. According to this reading of history, neither economic growth nor technological advances nor the pill nor changed cultural attitudes have contributed to the advance of women.

Odd, is it not, that organizations purporting to speak for women insist that all women's advances have been bestowed by men in judicial robes? Carla Hills, former assistant U.S. attorney general and former secretary of housing and urban development, has a better grasp of history, noting that women's greatest gains from public policy have come from legislative, not judicial, bodies.

- Professor Mary Ann Glendon of the Harvard Law School notes that not a single one of the more than 100 majority opinions that Judge Book has written on the Court of Appeals has been reversed in the Supreme Court. He has joined in more than 400 opinions, yet has written only nine dissents and seven partial dissents. She wonders why so much hysteria has attended the nomination of a judge whose career on the bench has been so "uneventful and conventional."

1,21 -2 Outside the Mainstream

T HE opposition to Judge Bork is not based alone on his generally proestablishment opinions as a judge, but also on the whole body of his statements and writings, which reveal him as outside the American mainstream on such questions as abortion, civil rights and the rights of individuals against the govern-ment. Nor is it reassuring that his differences with the mainstream are based not on racism or sexism but on his intellectual approach to the role of the Supreme Court. A vote against fair housing or affirmative action or a woman's right to an abortion is no less telling whether it is thoughtful or merely bigoted.

- Syndicated columnist William Raspberry.

flavors of what he called "the paranoid by a few academics who are in the main-style in American politics." by a few academics who are in the main-style in American politics." American legal thought." She notes that Judge Bork has been critical of what he constitutional law professors at leading schools who deeply mistrust popular gov-ernment." She continues: "As Judge Bork has pointed out many times with gentle humor in his law review articles, th no group in America whose political and social attitudes are so faithfully mirrored in the Supreme Court's more controversial decisions than this professorial elite." It has been 19 years since Chief Justice Earl Warren retired, and not a single landmark ming of the Warren court has been reversed. Yet the liberal lobbies practicing today's paranoid style of politics insist that Judge Bork threatens all American liberties. The evident presumption is that be would join four other tyrannical misogynists (is Sandra Day O'Connor one?) already on the court. Last Sunday, Planned Parenthood's full-page advertisement began: "If your senators vote to confirm the administration's latest Supreme Court nominee, you'll need more than a prescription to get birth control. It might take a con-stitutional amendment." Is there even a scintilla of sincerity in such rhetoric? Is it militant cynicism or ignorance? Could Planned Parenthood name a single state that would proscribe contra-ceptives if (this, too, is wildly improbable). the Supreme Court received a case that provided an opportunity for reversing the 1965 decision overturning Connecticut's law against contraceptives? (Judge Bork considered the law Indicrous but criticized the court's reasoning in overturning it.) Planned Parenthood says that, so far,

"our democratic system" has blocked the "extremists" who think as Judge Bork does. But Planned Parenthood clearly distrusts democracy. Its position is that Judge Bork "could radically change the way Americans live" because he favors enlarged deference toward representative institutions such as state legislatures — 61 percent of whose members are Demo- presidential campaigns. crats. Planned Parenthood clearly sug-to slip the short leash that liberal courts have them on, and that if they get off the leash they will legislate an end to, among other things, contraception.

Among the flops that Planned Parent-bood says are not "farfetched" are government-imposed childbearing quotas for families. Such nonsense has not been heard in American politics since the John Birch Society was saying that Dwight Eisenhower was a Communist agent. Birchers, like some of Judge Bork's critics, despise Americans as manipula-ble fools. But at least Birchers did not have the effrontery to advertise themselves as models of moderation. And there were no senators at that time willing to use such paranoia as fuel for ground at 87th Street and Broadway. New condominiums, part of a new Manhattan. But the old West Side is still across the street. Feldstein's Kosher Butcher is there, with slabs of liver in the window priced at $2.99 a pound and certified by Rabbi Y. Neiman of the Midtown Board of Kashruth.

Early for an appointment downtown, I walked 30 blocks, about a mile and a half, down Broadway to Columbus Circle on a crystal-clear late summer morning. It's a hellnva town, beginning at Kim's Korean market, where one of the Kims was happily popping grapes into the mouth of a tiny blond boy wearing a yarmulke. The boy's baby-sitter, a huge black woman, squeezed away nearby in search of the perfect grapefruit.

The bus shelter on the corner was plastered with notices for concerts, psychics, sofas for sale. But most of the handmade ads, 11 of them, were for movers. New Yorkers move fast and often.

A well-dressed old man, on his way to the office in the 1950s, tried to talk to me, but his words wouldn't come. "Don't mind him," said his nurse, a Puerto Rican. "He wants to be friendly. but he can't make sense anymore."

I stopped at The Learning Center near 85th Street. Adult education. Americans just keep learning. For $25 to $60, the catalog says, you can learn Spanish, word processing or hypnosis, real estate appraisal, comedy writing and how to improve your tennis serve.

city. The Riverside Hardware Store, near 82d Street, sells used typewriters out front, hardware for the hopeful writers who still come to the big city from everywhere in the world.

Artists come, too. Farther along Broadway, a young man was reading The New York Times and said in French to his companion: "Look, they say someone is going to buy a Van Gogh for $20 million. We are in the right place." And then, at 80th Street, there was Zabar's, the world's greatest delicatessen. I checked out the vegetarian chopped liver ($3.50 a pound) and counted a hundred different kinds of sausage before giving up. In front of the First Bapust Church

I was looking at the garden the Boy Scouts from Troop 515 were trying to plant, when a man in a very old, very dirty tweed sports jacket came up and shouted in my face: "You ass, you don't know the first thing about making pants." He was right. The man behind him gave me a pam-phlet called "Set Free!" — about finding God. It was by Charles Colson, the Oliver North of his day. In front of the Mormom Visitor Center, the man in the newspaper stand and a friend were speaking Urdu. And the man in the open phone booth was speaking Italian. The faces around us, though, were middle American, glowing magazine-cover faces — actors, actresses and models working and studying in and around the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. Finally, Columbus Circle was dominated by new construction, the frame-work of a 60-story condominium called Central Park Place. That will soon be dwarfed by the 925-foot tower that will replace the New York Coliseum and the 26-story building at 10 Columbus Circle. I was born here, on West 58th Street. Our block of brownstones was officially classified as substandard housing and then torn down to build the Coliseum. Now that is coming down to build higher and higher. They just won't leave

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Trade and Devaluation: Where's the Cheaper Beef? Administration efforts to achieve a more favorable balance of payments through devaluation of the American dollar have failed. An aspect of this failure which deserves more attention concerns the inability to increase significantly the sale of American manufactured goods and farm products abroad. I am an American who has lived in Berlin for the last five years and whose income is derived entirely in dollars. In the last 20 months the dollar has declined in relation to the Deutsche mark by more than one-third --- by almost half, in fact. The price in marks of American goods should have fallen accordingly, and American products not previously available in the West Ger-man marketplace should have begun to appear in competition with local products. It hasn't happened. My butcher charges me the same price for U.S. beefsteak (39 DM per kilo, or about $10 per pound) as he did 20 months ago.

I am told that a U.S.-manufactured automobile is no cheaper now in West Germany than it was then. I recently went shopping for a suit, shirts and shoes. American products were government-to-government-negotiations not to be had; nor were toasters, washing machines, radios or television sets. I can buy a French or Danish turkey, but an American turkey is not to be had at any price except in a U.S. Army PX.

Devaluation of the dollar is not the answer to the problem of the increasing trade deficit. The answer lies rather in the manufacture of better products at lower cost, and in more aggressive marketing of those products abroad. I see little evidence of that here in Berlin, But I do see a need to investigate why, with the declining value of the dollar, the price of U.S. beefsteak stays the same.

ROBERT JELLING. Berlin.

Regarding "Let's Face It, World Trade Isn't Free" (Sept. 1) by Jeff Faux:

True, world trade is not free, a depreci ating dollar will not alone cure the trade deficit and American business must become more competitive. It would also help if other countries would be as attractive as America for investors' capital. But Mr. Faux's advice to resort to the affairs commissioner,

Reciprocity when international trade is contracting can only lead to a greater contraction and, in the end, to a depression. Fewer Pupils to Teach

Regarding "American Schools Share

Dollar's Travails Abroad" (Sept. 9): It may be an error to consider that the lower level of registrations is entirely due to fewer Americans (or third-country nationals) being assigned to given countries in Europe. It is unlikely that companies with major investments would change policy only because of exchange rates. The cost of subsidizing the education of children of non-host country employees is unlikely to affect profits once these have been translated into home country currencies and consolidated. What seems to be more likely is that the schools have failed to heed the warnings of U.S. and European educational authorities who forecast a significant drop in the student population due to demographic reasons. Earlier this year, The Economist published an article indicating that European universities expected a 22 percent drop in registration for the 1990s. A similar situation, predicted for U.S. high schools in the 1980s, did develop, later than expected, and seems to be evident now. It could well be that American school administrators in Enrope assumed that the growth of student population seen in the late 1970s and early '80s would continue, and that as a result they overexpanded their programs and facilities and are now in trouble.

While company-subsidized students are generally in the majority, schools could provide assistance to those qualified who do not have this advantage and cannot pay high tuition fees. It would appear that realistic adjustments in planning today could avoid severe problems in the future.

Noise Can Be Bad for You

The Greek government is to be congranulated for clamping down on noise pollution. Surely there must be ways of educating the general public to the dan-gers of high decibel levels. Fining drivers who play their car radios too loudly or honk their horns unreasonably, or whose car security sirens go off for no reason, might have some effect. And fines might discourage stores from blasting music into the street. But nothing seems to be as effective as the oft-repeated message that something — smoke, high fat levels in food, heavy drinking, refusal to use seat belts - is a threat to health. Educating the public to the hazards of noise pollution is the business of all governments.

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate has approved a nonbinding resolu-tion supporting President Ronald Reagan's efforts to reach an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union, but emphasizing the Sen-ate's role in setting arms control policy and approving treaties.

The vote Tuesday was 92-1. It came after the leadership of the Democratic-controlled body broke a threatened Republican filibuster against the proposal by saying it would hold all-night sessions and delay Judiciary Committee hearings on the president's nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court

The resolution is an amend to the Defense Department program-authorization bill, which the enate began debating Friday after Republicans blocked action on it

After the Republicans were forced to drop their filibuster, they voted for the Democratic resolution in an apparent effort to dimin-ish its political significance. Some cars are special.

You love them or you hate them.

Either way they have a character all their own. As makers of fine cars since 1927 we find it a challenging experience, trying to make a great design even better. Without losing the special qualities that made Volvo a great car from the beginning. Sitting behind the wheel, you know instinctively that the Volvo 760 is one of the finest cars on the road.

GREAT CARS DON'T CHANGE THEY MATURE

It gives you more than a ride few other cars can equal. It is also one of the very few luxury cars in which all the luxury is standard.

The Volvo 760 is assembled almost entirely by hand, by teams of skilled craftsmen, assisted by modern technology, in our most advanced car factory. Each one is made to order.

Driving along your favourite stretch of beautifully winding road, you'll appreciate the difference. Great cars don't change with time. They mature.

With the Volvo 760 you may have a choice of three power plants: a 2.8-litre V6 injection engine with microprocessor-controlled ignition, a 2.3-litre 4-cylinder Turbo engine or a 2.4-litre in-line 6-cylinder Turbo Diesel. Both turbo engines feature a boosting intercooler. The automatic transmission is four-speed with overdrive. The manual option for the Turbo versions is five-speed. The outstanding Volvo Multilink Rear Axle provides superior roadholding characteristics and an exceptionally comfortable ride. With every Volvo 760 you also get the unique Volvo Advantage Programme. It includes 24-hour Roadside Assistance and a special road atlas-Volvo Guide Europe. You will also be offered the loan of a car or alternative transportation while your Volvo is being serviced-or dependable pick-up and delivery arrangements. And with the Volvo Advantage Programme, you will be eligible to apply for the Volvo/Diners Club card. The specifications of the Volvo 760 and the Volvo Advantage Programme may vary from country to country. For detailed information, please contact your nearest Volvo dealer. Japan's New Entry in the Train Race By Walter Sullivan New York Times Service MIMITSU, Japan — Japan is testing its latest candidate for ground travel that can compete with air travel — a high-speed train that rides on an invisible cushion generated by its superconducting magnets and is propelled by a remote-cootrol magnetic system. The traio's superconducting magnets are composed of materials that lose all resistance to electricity at very low temperatures, becoming highly efficient. They are cooled by liquid helium, which is costly to handle and must be refrigerated on board. Higher-temperature superconductors discovered recently could make such trains

The test center here is 30 miles north of Miyazaki on Japan's southern island of Kyushu. Halfway down its seven-kilometer (4.3mile) track the train can reach a speed of 260 miles an hour but then must begin slowing to halt smooth-ly at the far end. It is assumed that higher speeds will be possible in intercity travel. Japan's more conventional Shinkansen, or "bullet" train, between Tokyo and Osaka, runs at 130 miles an bour, and France's TGV (Train à Grande Vitesse) reaches 170 mph, a speed that is believed to be close to the talize on one of the world's fastest limit for rail-riding trains.

The train is propelled by the force that causes magnets of similar polarity to repel one another and those of opposite polarity to be drawn together. The propulsion electromagnets, mounted along the track, are powered from a nearby substation. In an intercity operation, ooe such station would be required every 30 miles according to the project director, Dr. Hajime

The substation feeds alternating current to the propulsion magnets. Because the current is alternating these magnets continuously reverse their magnetic polarity, alternately pulling and pushing at a rate timed to match the desired speed of the

A similar project has been proposed for the European Economic Community. Two other projects are a 1,000-foot line linking Britain's Birmingham airport with a railroad station and the High Speed Surface Transport project of Japan Airlines, which has been exhibited at two world's fairs but is not now in operation.

According to Dr. Tagaki the train being tested here is consid-ered suitable for service between 70-minute service between Los Angeles and Las Vegas could be built for less than $2 billion.

Women Have a Better Sense of Smell

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Women have a better sense of smell than men and people who do not work cannot smell as well as people who have jobs, the National Geographic Society reported in a $1 million survey, to which 1.5 million people around the world responded. The survey, a scratch-and-sniff study distributed in the September 1986 issue of the National Geographic Magazine, was conducted with two researchers from the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia.

Sex and smell have always been linked," said Charles Wysocoki. a researcher. Results showed women always have an edge at smelling, and it increases drastically with hormonal changes at puberty, he said.

Lemmings' Mass Suicide Called Myth

OSLO (Reuters) — Lemmings, best known for stampeding to their death off the cliffs of Norway, are oot committing mass suicide, contrary to popular belief, according to Arne Semb-Johansson, a Norwegian professor who has studied the rodents for more than 20 years.

They are victims of their own frenzied urge to multiply, Dr. Sembensson said. Every three to five years, lemmings find that their frantic coupling has caused a population explosion, producing the same frayed nerves and desire to flee as it does in humans, he said. A lemming is mature at two weeks and has gestation period of about three weeks.

In a so-called "lemming year" millions of lemmings head for the coastal lowlands in search of food and space. "But I can tell you they doo't commit suicide when they fall off cliffs into lakes or the sea — that's, a myth," said the professor. "When you have thousands and thousands of small animals running together, they just don't see the water or the cliff."

Cuba Plans To Test All Its Citizens For AIDS

By Larry Thompson Washington Post Service QUITO, Ecuador - Cuba's delegate to an international confer ence here on AIDS has described one of the most aggressive programs of any country to control the soread of the disease, including testing of the country's 10 million people.

The plan also includes testing nearly everyone who enters the country for a long stay and a virtual quarantine for Cubans known to be infected with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The delegate, Dr. Hector Terry, a deputy minister of public health, said 10 percent of the population had already been tested for the vi-

In an interview with Cuban radio, Dr. Terry said the entire population would be tested. "By 1989," he said, "we hope to have montored 100 percent of the popula-tion" for AIDS, Reuters reported from Havana.

["People should avoid fortuitous contacts with foreigners," he said. But he emphasized that there were no plans to impose mandatory medical tests for tourists or resident diplomats.]

"Our country is a poor country," Dr. Terry said in an interview Tuesday. "If many Cubans become in-fected and sick, I do not know how we would take care of them. It would cost too much. We really have to prevent such a situation.

The meeting in Quito is the first nternational conference on AIDS in Latin America. Sponsored by the Pan American Health Organiza-tion and World Health Organization, the two-day conference drew 500 specialists and was beamed by television to 500 sites in 30 countries, including Cuba.

The measures described by the Cuban delegate have only been debated in the countries represented, including the United States.

All Cubans returning from abroad are now routinely tested. Foreigners intending to stay in Cuba for longer than three months also are tested for the HIV infection, Dr. Terry said.

Dr. Terry said the first steps came in 1983, even before human immune deficiency virus, HIV, the agent that causes AIDS, was identi-fied. Cuba banned imported blood and blood products believed even then, and later shown, to transmit the disease, he said, and no Cuban hemophiliacs have become infect-

> - tists developed a blood test to iden-- tify those infected with the virus.

The massive study has detected 147 infected individuals, according to Dr. Terry. Five Cubans have Those Cubans who have been infected with HIV now live in : sanatorium in Boyeros, a municipality in the Havana suburbs, said the doctor. The interned Cubans are allowed home visits, he said.

Cuba is the first country to have tested its population so extensively, according to Pan American Health

Although AIDS initially spread only among homosexual men in Cuba, just as in the United States, it is now spread heterosexually, Dr. Terry said. Intravenous drug abuse does not appear to play a signifi-cant role. Bisexual men appear to have spread the virus into the Cu-ban heterosexual population, he

Cuba has tested pregnant wom-en extensively and, beginning next month, expects to begin testing anyone who enters a hospital or goes to a physician's office, Dr. Terry said, U.S. officials have been dehating such widespread testing, but a final decision has yet to he

The Cubans believe the virus when a Cuban national living in New York City became infected and then spread it in others after returning home, said Francisco Machado, a biochemist working with the Cuban AIDS program. Every Cuban national who was out of the country between 1975 and 1986 was tested for HIV infecand 1980 was tested for FIV inter-tion, including soldiers returning from Angola, but "we detected a low number of infected people," Dr. Terry said. Cuba maintains about 50,000 personnel, most of them soldiers, in Africa.

Some scientists and others have speculated that Cuba probably has a higher infection rate than is being reported because so many soldiers had served in Africa, where HIV is widespread. Dr. Terry said some soldiers were infected, but not

Suriname Reported To Kill 40 Guerrillas

PARAMARIBO, Suriname The army destroyed a major guerrilla camp south of the capital last weekend, killing about 40 rebels, according to the official Suriname press agency. The agency said Tuesday that in the two-hour battle, only a few of the rebels, led by a former soldier, Ronny Brunswijk, managed to essome from the camp near Pokigron.

Somiles (140 kilometers) south of Paramaribo. The rebels have been lighting since July 1986 to overthrow the military government of Commander Desi Bouterse, who took power in Suriname, a former Dutch colony, in a coup in 1980.

Every year in August, Datamation magazine publishes its league table of the top European computer manufacturers. This time Siemens heads the list for the third year in succession.

What better confirmation of customers' confidence in our advanced products? The system 7-500 family of mainframe computers, all running under the same BS2000 operating system, SINIX-based office computers, CAD work stations, personal computers, and laser printers, as well as sophisticated digital telephone systems.

All these are the result of decades of experience and intensive R&D effort in data processing and communications.

As the trend of the nineties will be more and more networking, the strength of Siemens in computing and communications is your guarantee for the future. The more faith shown by our users, the stronger our position in the world market, which in turn means more security for our customers.

The world of document processing.

We document the world.

Document processing. It's a new way of describing what's been going on in the office since there was an office—the creating, copying, distributing and filing of ideas.

Why a new description? Because the documents have changed and the process of producing them has changed.

Today, a document can be both a piece of paper, and an electronic image viewed on a workstation screen. And document processing is no longer just typewriter and copier, but computer systems, advanced electronics and laser technology.

Xerox planted the seed for this "new" world with the invention of today's office copier. (For the first time a quality document could be turned out, instantly, with the push of a button.) Since the stream of product copying. Laser properties that a workstations for document. And, a systems that move world of electron these innovations document process world with the the first time a qualing to with the push of a button.) Since that time, Team Xerox has introduced a steady stream of products and systems that go far beyond simple copying. Laser printers. Complete publishing systems. Typewriters that remember. Facsimile machines. Workstations for the creation of the new electronic document. And, most recently, scanners and electronic filing systems that move documents back and forth between the world of electronics and the world of paper. As a result of these innovations, Rank Xerox is at the head of the class in document processing.

What does this mean for your world and the productivity you strive for?

Today's businesses are judged by the documents they turn out. And it's not just how good they look, but how effective and persuasive they are in communicating their content that determines whether a business lives or dies. Rank Xerox leadership in document processing can give your business a potent competitive advantage by making your documents great looking, easier to produce, and more compelling than ever before.

Document processing from Rank Xerox. It is our heritage, our day-to-day business, and our role as a leader in office productivity. For more information about document processing and what it can do for you, write or phone your local Rank Xerox office. Whether it's printed on paper, seen on a screen, a perfect copy, or a brilliant original—what you see is what we do.

INTERNATIONAL MANAGER

Perhaps All That Pressure Makes Time Managers Tick

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

ARIS - "Folks, this is the time to decide bow you want to live your life, and live it. Have fun. Misery is optional," counseled Steve Betts, a management trainer, at a course attended by 65 British managers last week. The program. sponsored by Time Manager International of Denmark, is aimed at teaching executives how to get their lives organized.

Many large European companies, such as British Caledonian Airways, Trafalgar House Group Services and Digital Equip-ment Co. Ltd. of Britain; Kaufhof AG, Bertelsmann AG, and Hapag-Lloyd AG of West Germany; and Zanussi SpA, Banca regression, a sort of

Anonymous is held

Popolare di Bergamo and Ba-rilla of Italy are signing up their managers for the course. At some companies, man-agers are being shamed into showing signs of using the or-ganizational diaries.

The system advocated by Time Manager International is simple: Define your professional and personal goals, break them down into tasks and then subdivide the tasks once more into specific activities. Then, set a specific time in your Time Manager for performing each task. Don't forget! "The way to hell is paved with good intentions."

Unlike many organizers, the Time Manager has a cross-reference system that links what you plan to do to when you are going to do it. That makes it less likely that users will simply accumulate a lot of information that they never bother to look at

Practical tips along the way include planning your day the night before, anticipating crises, setting time axide for daydream-ing and fantasy, taking "stretch" breaks throughout the day to relax and varying your routine to fight boredom.

To give participants an idea of much better they will feel after changing their daily planning. Mr. Betts asked them to cross their arms the way they normally do — and then try crossing them the other way. As anyone who has tried it will tell you, "It's uncomfortable. You'll hate it, loathe it and detest it," Mr. Betts warned the budding time managers.

N SPITE of the jolt to the system — most people have been organizing (or not organizing) their time the same way for years — Time Manager International estimates that 80 percent of participants are using their Time Managers a year later. Its estimate is based on refill orders.

A total of 100,000 British managers, 10,000 West German managers and 10,000 Italian managers attended the Time Manager course and related classes last year,

Why are so many managers willing to go through all this pain? Perhaps because so many managers are using them that oot having one can be a disadvantage, especially at meetings.

"I got fed up turning up at meetings along with these people from the project area with their Time Managers who started quoting verbatim what you had said to them at the last meeting," said Peter May, an office applications consultant at DEC.

Mr. May describes himself as a hard-driving worksholic who is reasonably organized, but sometimes gets too bogged down in detail. "In my flapsy box [a time manager's affectionate reference to a messy briefcasel, I would have a project file, a correspondence file and additional background material.

"Those attending meetings with their Time Managers turn to their notes faster than you can, as you desperately search through your flapsy box," he said. "It makes you feel like a worm." British Caledonian is sending most of its senior managers and some of its directors to the course. "I can see at meetings the ones who are organized. The ones who aren't usually haven't been on See MANAGER, Page 15

Facility Will Also Be in Ohio

New York Times Sernce DETROIT - Honda Motor Co. Ltd. is widely expected to an-nounce Thursday a decision to build a second car assembly plant in the United States.

A report in The Detroit News, citing unnamed sources, said the new plant, near Honda's facility in Marysville, Ohio, would increase Honda's U.S. production capacity to "well over" the 360,000 cars it now builds annually. The facility would be able to turn out several models, including luxury cars now imported for distribution by the Acura division, the report said.

U.S. carmakers rely on new upscale models to counter imports. Page 15.

Jeff Leestma, a spokesman for Honda of North America, would ot confirm the account on Wednesday. But he did say the company would make "probably our biggest announcement ever in North America" at a news conference in Columbus, Ohio, on Thursday. The conference will be attended by Tadashi Kume, president of the parent company, and Tetsuo Chino, president of Honda of North America.

In Tokyo, a Honda spokesman said the amouncement would con-cern expansion in the United States but declined to provide details. Honda said last month that it was considering an additional American plant as part of its drive to increase its sales in the United States, It would become the first foreign automaker to solely own more than one such plant in the United States.

Japanese carmakers originally turned to production in the United States when import quotas prevent-ed them from increasing sales. The companies are now also finding American plants to be attractive because the stronger yen has made Japanese imports more expensive, Honda, the third-largest carmaker in Japan, was the first Japanese company to establish an assembly plant in the United States. Earlier his summer, it became the first Japanese company to export its American-made vehicles to Japan when it started shipping Gold Wing touring motorcycles.

TOKYO - Japan and the United States are groping for ocw ways to settle their trade differences after years of disputes that have led to rising frustration on both sides,

Mike Mansfield, the U.S. ambas sador to Japan, said this week that al negotiations "nit-picking" and called for global solutions to the trade problem.

Mr. Mansfield, copphasizing that he was expressing a personal coin-

Turns Critics Into Believers

By Michael Isikoff and Sandra Sugawara WASHINGTON — It rolled off the presses five years ago this week, a bright, splashy newspa-per touted as the national show-piece for one of the biggest U.S. media empires, Gannett Co., and its chairman, Allen H. Neuharth. In the months that followed, Mr. Neuharth's "baby" was scorned by critics as "junk-food journalism" and derided by many financial analysts — as well as some top Gannett ac-ended drain on the corporate bottom line.

But as USA Today celebrated its fifth birthday Tuesday with a lavish party followed by a private reception with President Ronald Reagan, there was a consensus that "McPaper," as it sometimes calls itself, has become a comment fixture on the bottom line.

countants - as a wasteful, open-come a permanent fixture on the American journalistic landscane. Its use of color and graphics is widely imitated, and many newspaper editors, while continuing to question USA Today's editorial quality, say it has brought wigor and energy to the industry.

More importantly, to Wall Street analysts and millions of Gannett shareholders, USA Today recently has shown the first signs of edging into the black. Advertising revenue is up more than 40 percent from last year and the circulation picture is even brighter. USA Today's circulation is 1.54 million, according to its last official report, the second-largest in the United States after the Wall Street Journal's 2 million. USA Today says it also has an international circulation of some 35,000.

"When it started, it was a massively innovative creation, planned and executed like a marine invasion," said Joseph Fuchs, an analyst with the Wall Street firm of Kidder, Peabody.

"The publishing community roundly said that it would be a spectacular failure and that nobody needed it," Mr. Fuchs said. The paper is now moving from Will it or will it not be a success? to 'How much of a success

MCA Reported Planning Theme Park in Europe

By Kathryn Harris

Los Angeles Times Service LOS ANGELES — MCA Inc., a major U.S. filmmaker and entertainment company that is mounting a challenge to Walt Disney Co. in the burgeoning theme park business, is preparing to build a major attraction in Europe — most likely on the coast of Spain, according to sources familiar with the project. If Spain is selected, MCA would try to complete construction by 1992, when the Olympics are scheduled to be held in Barcelona, these sources said. The theme park would include a studio tour attraction, sound stages for motion picture and television production and resort facilities, the sources said. No budget has been set, but the anticipated cost of the project is in the $500 million range, one source said.

MCA intends to enlist partners and separate financing to avoid encumbering its own balance sheet with debt. The sources said the Los Angeles-based company presum-ably would enlist Cineplex Odeon as a partner and Steven Spielberg, a

Cineplex Odeon, a Canadian entertainment company, is halfowned by MCAL

According to sources, MCA's president, Sidney J. Sheinberg, and the company's vice president and key acquisitions executive, Charles S. Paul, are expected to travel to Spain for negotiations next week. Mr. Paul, reached by telephone late Tuesday, said, "It is MCA's policy not to comment oo rumors."

The sources also said that MCA officials have oot ruled out building a park in the Paris suburbs. where Disney is building its Enro Disneyland, Euro Disneyland is scheduled to open in 1992 on 4,800 acres (1936 hectares) in Marne-la-Vallee, 18 miles (29 kilometers) east

But they said Spain appears to have the edge because of the availmilder weather and Spain's eager-operator after losing the Disney project to France in 1985. Sources would not identify the sites under consideration, but said that Barcelona appears to be a likely candidate because it is Spain's second most populous city, has a mild climate and is less than 100 miles from the French border. If the MCA project in Europe is launched, it would create yet another arena for competition with Disney, which has dominated the theme park industry until now.

In the past year, Disney and MCA have squared off over theme park projects in Florida and South-ern California. The two giants — headquartered just a few miles from one another in southern California — appear to have galvanized one another. MCA, for example, has operated studio tour for 23 years at its sprawling headquarters in Univer-sal City but dragged its heels on groundbreaking for a similar at-traction in Orlando, first announced in 1981.

Then Disney broke ground in 1986 on its own Florida studio tonr. In December, MCA announced that it had finally found a suitable partner in Cineplex and expected to open its Florida attraction in 1989, the year after Disney begins operating its studio tour at nearby Walt Disney World.

Early this year, Disney disclosed its willingness to build a studio tour attraction in Burbank, Less than a month later, MCA responded with a plan to spend more than $100 million upgrading its Universal Studios Tour.

Although the structure of MCA's proposed deal has not been set, the sources said the company would follow Disney's lead in France, taking a minority position in owner-ship and collecting a management fee to operate the park.

Disney has no ownership interest in Tokyo Disoeyland, which opened in 1983, but pockets 7.5 percent of gross revenues from ad-missions, merchandising and food ability and cost of land, as well as sales as its management fee. "You're in these deals for the manoess to lure a major theme park agement fees," one source said.

SEC Proposes Limits On 'Market Sweeps'

WASHINGTON — The Securities and Ex-change Commission proposed a rule Wednes-day to curb so-called "market sweeps" in which huge blocks of stock in a company targeted in a tender offer are bought by corporate raiders and arbitragers.

The proposal, which was submitted for public comment, would generally prevent anyone from buying 10 percent or more of a company's stock in the open market during and immediately following a tender offer.

Any purchase of at least 10 percent of a company's stock during the tender offer period would have to be made through a separate tender offer under the proposal.

The 4-1 vote of the commissioners to propose the rule for public comment followed three and a half hours of debate among the commissioners and a divided SEC staff, with lawyers on the staff and the panel generally squaring off

Charles Cox, an SEC commissioner who was the only economist on the panel, was the lone dissenter in the decision. He said that he saw no evidence showing markets sweeps to be a prob-lem for orderly markets. The other members of

Why are we pouring away the world's most fertile environment?

Life began at the water's edge, and that watery environment - marsh, estuary and coast - is still some of the most fertile on the planet's surface, supporting flora and fauna which could not survive anywhere else.

Man and wetlands.

Since before recorded history man has settled at the water's edge to fish in wetland waters or farm the rich wetland soils. Many early civilizations were founded upon wetlands, and millions of people are still dependent on them today.

> Wetlands are being changed and destroyed all over the world.

But ideas have changed. In many parts of the world wetlands are considered wastelands to be drained or filled-in. And it's often the taxpayers who finance the destruction of these diverse and productive natural areas.

In the tropical regions ambitious, yet often poorly conceived, land improvement schemes, irrigation and hydro-power projects change the whole nature of age old ecological systems. And the future productivity of these wetlands is threatened for the sake of a short term advantage.

regularly finance the drainage of even privately-owned wetlands to the detriment of the public's need for fish production. flood control, water purification and recreational sites.

Support our international effort to save wetlands.

WWF has prepared an international programme to save wetlands which will: Develop existing wetland reserves, set up new ones, and train national park staff in wetlands' management techniques.
Support those lobbying efforts which highlight the value of wetlands in land-use policies, and help secure allocations of money for conservation aid. Continue to fund wetland conservation projects in dozens of countries including such important wetlands as those in Irian Jaya, the Djoudj in Senegal, Pantanal in Brazil and Lange Lacke in Austria.

But these things will only happen if you support them with your money. Please help. Write for further details to: World Wildlife Fund, World Conservation Centre,

U.S. Automakers Are Relying on New Upscale Models to Counter Imports

AND THE RESERVE OF THE PARTY OF

DETROIT - U.S. automakers' lineup for the 1988 year will feature new models designed to hold and expand their core market share among middle-aged, middle-income and affluent luxury-car buyers, in a sales arena that importers have on to target. Attracting the greatest attention of the models for the year starting Oct. 1 will be a family of intermediate-sized cars from General Motors Corp., the longtime industry leader that has been struggling to maintain its supremacy.

While GM targets the massive middle ound, its main domestic rivals, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., hope to attract the top end of the market.

European and Japanese makers have new models that will make the U.S. auto market even more crowded.

Industry expects estimate the range of possible vehicle variations available to American buyers at more than 600. The major offerings from GM will consist of front-wheel-drive, mid-sized cars. The first product, an all-new Buick Regal two-door coupe, goes on sale in early October. The new Oldsmobile Cut-lass Supreme and Pontiac Grand Prix coupés are expected to be introduced in late winter or early spring.

Analysts say GM needs a winner to help it bounce back from the disappointments of the past two years, when executives slashed budgets to conserve cash.

Ford's new products will be led by a styled Chrysler New Yorker. The conser-front-wheel-drive Lincoln Continental varively styled cars are equipped with Vo with more serodynamic styling derived from the Taurus/Sable line.

The six-passenger sedan is intended to fill a gap in its lineup after the rear-drive sor failed to attract desired sales from its upscale target audience.

Ford hopes the new Continental, expected in late December, will bring in enough wealthy younger buyers to generate up to 40,000 sales in the first 12 months, about twice the selling rate for the old model.

The upcoming model year marks the unveiling of Chrysler's long-promised pair of more-lumnious cars, the frontwheel-drive Dodge Dynasty and a revarively styled cars are equipped with V6 engines jointly developed by Chrysler and its Japanese partner, Mitsubishi Motors Corp. and are expected to be priced no higher than about $20,000.

Also giving some vitality to the Chrysler's image will be a low-volume $30,000 sports car developed jointly by Chrysler and the Italian maker, Maserati. Enropean automakers have begun di-versifying their lines to keep up with the American taste for variety. West Germa-ny's BMW has a new line of cars called the M Series. It is is based on exis models but uses the old Detroit trick of increasing horsepower and adding racing Honda Motor Corp. Ltd. is offering a 1988 coupé version of its Acura Legend that sells for more than $28,000. It will also begin importing a new, restyled version of its sporty Prelude.

Toyota and Nissan plan to establish their own high-end divisions. Mazda will import a larger luxury car called the 929 that will sell for around $19,000. The company will also offer a two-door version of its 626 sedan to be built at its higan plant and sold as the MX-6. Dollar Steady in European Trading

LONDON - The dollar closed little changed Wednesday in lackhister European trading dealers said, as market participants failed to find any fresh factors justifying either an extension or a reversal of its lower close in New York on Tuesday.

In London, the dollar closed at 1.8140 Deutsche marks, after 1.8138 on Tuesday; at 144.17 yen, from 144.10, at 1.5052 Swiss francs from 1.5045 and at 6.0450 French francs after 6.0525.

The British pound was also steady against the U.S. currency, at $1.6460 from $1.6420.

Dealers said trading in Europe had been confined to a tight range between 1.8095 DM and 1.8163 DM. They reported a reappearance of the short-covering that had emerged following Friday's news of a record $16.47 billion U.S. trade deficit in July. This buying support helped prevent a continuation of Tuesday's drift downward.

Although most market partici-pants remained convinced that the dollar is destined to fall further, London Dollar Rates dealers said, there is little conviction for aggressive selling.

In New York at midday, the dollar edged up to the day's peak on

The dollar's move was most marked against the ven and coincided with a sell-off in yen futures

The rally also occurred while the U.S. government securities market was moving to its morning highs amid talk that congressional budget negotiators are optimistic about g on measures to cut the federal budget deficit.

But currency dealers doubted that this news generated any dollar buying.

The U.S. currency rose to 144.45 yen, from 143.60 on Tuesday.

Says Yen's Rise not expect any dramatic falls in the dollar in the near term, predicting Faces Limits instead a gentle decline, reflecting caution based on fears of central bank intervention to curb extreme

For the moment, they said, the market lacks any fresh stimulus to move the dollar significantly.

In New York, the dollar also rose to 1.8195 DM from 1.8115 on Tnesday, Dealers said much of the buying was from investment iouses and speculators in response to the decline in currency futures in Chicago.

U.S. economic figures showing industry operating at a slightly stronger-than-expected 81 percent of capacity also helped support the dollar, dealers said. Capacity use for June and July was revised upwards to 80.3 percent and 80.9 per-

In earlier European trading, the dollar was fixed slightly lower in Frankfurt at 1.8123 DM from 1.8176 on Tuesday, and in Paris at 6.0445 French francs from 6.0660. In Zurich, the dollar closed unchanged at 1.5025.

Bank of Japan

TOKYO - The Bank of Japan does not expect further acceleration of the yen's rise against the dollar, central bank sources said Wednesday. The yea, which closed in To tyo at 143.80 to the dollar, will e limited in its rise by Japanese and U.S. economic fundamentals, they told reporters. The United States is working to reduce its trade deficit and Japan its surplus, they said, and this imbalance is expected to decline graduallly.

They said currency markets reacted calmly to Friday's news of a record monthly U.S. trade deficit for July because the $16.47 billion figure was within expectations when seasonal fac-ors were considered. This market also interpreted the recent half-point rise in the U.S. discount rate as a display of U.S. determination to stabi lize exchange rates, they added

IMF Urges U.S. to Reduce Its Budget Deficit

By Hobart Rowen
Washington Past Service

WASHINGTON - The International Monetary Fund has called on the United States to gut its budget deficit even if that risks an economic downturn at home, because of increasing concern over the destabilizing impact of the huge U.S. trade delicit.

The Fund in its annual report set for release Thursday, also urged Japan and West Germany to take further steps to stimulate their domestic economies.

The report is a prelude to the joint meeting of the IMF and World Bank beginning here Sept. 29, where the problems of trade imbalances and exchange rates will head the agenda. Economists have argued that the budget deficit, which reached a record $220.7 billion last year and is expected at $157 billion this year, exacerbates the trade deficit, partly by stimulating economic demand that gets channeled into imports.

In the past, they say, the budget deficit also pushed U.S. interest an imprates and thus the dollar higher, capital making U.S. exports more expensive and imports cheaper. Trade patterns were significantly altered and have taken time to react to a falling dollar.

also hit a record, of $152.6 billion, and in the first seven months has run at an annual rate of $168.7 billion.

If the American trade deficit, and the mirror-image Japanese and German surpluses, persist for much longer, the bluntly-worded report said, there would be "serious implications for growth throughout the world economy." Many economists have argued that faster growth in Germany and Japan would reduce these imbalances and help stimplate the world economy.

These comments amounted to a reiteration of the IMF's suggestions to the biggest of its 151 member nations over the past three or four years. But the urgency of the message was underscored by the persistence of the trade imbalances in the face of a nearly 50 percent depreciation of the dollar against the yen and Deutsche mark in the

The IMF is scheduled to have a major role in carrying through this process.

The annual report, sources say, contains a somewhat sanitized version of the IMF's consultations, inasmuch as the member countries have final control on what gets published. But the narrative as released contains at least a hint of the IMF's advice.

It called for action to correct the U.S. budget deficit, and said that foreign demand." "while such fiscal correction might weaken domestic demand in the West Germany to accelerate major short run, it would lead to a lasting reduction in real interest rates, to an improvement in prospects for Turning to the Japanese economy, it said that "the need to correct the large current account surplus would have to expand rapidly for economy's potential." It also said "there is a need to press ahead with a range of structural reforms, notably as regards land use regulations, financial deregulation, agricultural subsidies, taxation, and foreign access to domestic markets."

The fund also called for creased domestic demand in West Germany, noting that "policies need to be restructured so as to facilitate the reorientation of the economy away from a reliance on

PARIS - The French cabinet approved a reduction in the nation's budget deficit Wednesday to 114.9 billion francs ($19.01 billion) in 1988 from 129 billion francs this year, Budget Minister Alain Juppé said Wednesday. He said that the deficit would represent 2.1 percent of France's gross domestic product in 1988, compared with 2.5 percent in 1987. GDP is a measure of the nation's output of goods and services minus income from operations abroad. The 1988 budget deficit is in line ith Finance Minister Edouard Balladur's target of cutting the deficit to about 115 billion francs in 1988 and by a further 15 billion francs in each of the following three years.

EVELYN WAUGH: The Early Years 1903-1939

By Martin Stannard. 537 pages. $24.95. W. W. Norton & Co., 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10110.

E VELYN WAUGH has enjoyed a run of good luck ever since he dropped dead on Easter Sunday in 1966. lo relatively rapid order Christopher Sykes brought out a hefty, authorized biography. Waugh's diaries, letters and essays were collected in three massive volumes; his major oovels were reissued in an attractive, uniform edition, and, for a few weeks the television miniseries of "Brideshead Revisited" made English Catholics of us all.

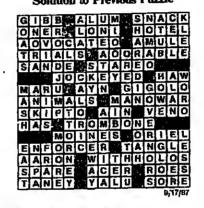

Usually, of course, a writer's death leads to a downswing in critical opinion. But the estimation of Waugh's worth has always been high and is going higher. Many would even name Waugh the finest English oovelist since D.H. Lawrence, a writer he instinctively loathed.

Waugh was good at loathing. In his later years he made himself into the eccentric Tory squire par excellence, a Colonel Blimp quivering with prejudices and jowls, eyes usually bulging with rage over some (resh indignity. Endlessly quotable, unremittingly malicious, Waugh became his own comic mas The older Waugh displays the fascination of the abomination. Io some recess of our hearts, we would all like to be as nasty as he, if only we possessed his courage or his convictions. The growth of those convictions makes up a large part of Martin Stannard's story in "Evelyn Waugh: The Early Years," a literary biography of the same caliber as Richard Ellmann's "James Joyce," James Lees-Milne's "Harold Nicolson." Hilary Sourling's "lvy Compton-Burnett and Rupert Hart-Davis's "Hugh Walpole." It's a long book — over 500 pages for only half a life — but if you like Waugh you can hardly have enough of him.

Stannard writes a dry, efficient prose, he is an expert oo Waugh's reputation and he presents more fairly some controversial aspects of his subject, especially the break-up of his first marriage. Stannard also describes his book as an attempt "to forge a relationship between the crucial events of Waugh's life and his develop. ing aesthetic" - and in this he is equalsuccessful. Stannard's only apparent weakness should have been corrected by a good editor. He misspells dozens of proper names. Nits, of course. Anyone who reads this book will have

"The Early Years" opens with a long chapter on Wangh's literary family: Edmand Gosse, the leading critic of his day, was the cousin of Wangh's father, Arthur, who ran the publishing the course of Chapman and Hall Emphasized ing bouse of Chapman and Hall. Evelyn's older brother Alec even enjoyed an early literary vogue with "The Loom of Youth," a kind of proto "Catcher in the Rye" about goings-on in an English prep school.

After school - where he was successful and steemed - Waugh went up to Oxford and there fell under the sway of the aesthete Harold Acton. He acquired fine bindings, Beardsley prints, and took to carrying a cane.

Waugh drifted along with the music of time until Anthony Powell finally set his true career into motion. Charged with discovering new talent for the publisher Duckworth, Powell commissioned his college chum to write a short biography of Rossetti. During its composition. Waugh started to fiddle around with a connovel, at first called "Untoward Incidents" and later "Decline and Fall."

Together the biography and novel launched the new author into the London social whirl There he met Evelyn Gardner, very much in love, the two Evelyns married. Unexpectedly, though, She-Evelyn fell in love with another man. Waugh was crushed.

Waugh then embarked on several years of nigh life and constant travel. In the early '30s he began to grow increasingly concerned with religion. "We cannot maintain civilisation without Christianity," he wrote, "therefore we should choose the most consistently organised system of Christian philosophy." Many of his friends had gone over to Rome and, before long, he too was receiving instruction.

Despite his religious commitment — and like fellow converts G.K. Chesterton and Ronald Knox, he was to become more Catholic than the pope — Waugh continued to enjoy love affairs, by preference with elegant, aristocatic women.

One day in Italy, however, the hot young novelist met a young woman named Laura Herbert, whom he described in his diary as looking like a "white mouse." A few years later he proposed to her. As it happens, this unlikely match proved happy. Waugh settled into life as a country gentleman at Piers Court. The coming of war, however, changed all Waugh's plans for a cultivated private life. "The Early Years" ends in 1939, with the middle-aged oovelist finally accepted into the Royal Marines and finding in them "a fastidious, masculine tradition of selfless courage, culture opposing anarchy." Little does he suspect that the days of chivairy are long past.

only 13 high-card points, it has enormous potential in support of hearts. Every suit is controlled, and South is likely to be able to develop diamonds or score spade ruffs.

As it happens, the hands fit perfectly, and all 13 tricks can be made. The guess for the club queen can he avoided by ruffing out the diamond act and establishing the fifth diamond in the dummy.

North-South have to restrain themselves. If they donble, they can run into a redouble, and if they bid, they can suffer a 1700 penalty in six spades doubled. Any on these results would have won the match for North-South, but unfortunately North was con-tent to raise cautiously to four hearts. The deal was a standoff, but it gave Denny some thing to dream about.

Mahaffey, at 77 years old, and Denny, at 75, are the oldest pair ever to reach the final of a major American Knockout Team Championship. They just failed to repeat the victory they scored in the same event two years earlier, but they had a silver lining: their

Tigers Rally, Keep Apace of Blue Jays

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches DETROIT - Darrell Evans hit a three-run homer and Kirk Gibson a two-run shot Tuesday night to help the Detroit Tigers erase a 5-0 lead, beat the Boston Red Sox, 9-8, and remain tied for first place in the American League East with the Toronto Blue Jays.

Boston's Todd Benzinger hit his first major-league grand slam and drows in three more runs with two singles, but said, "It's not too enjoyble. Seven RBI just wasn't enough.
"When it was 5-0 in the first, there were a lot of people out there yelling, '5-0 is nothing in this park.' I just kind of smiled at 'em. But those guys kept scratching. They have a great attitude. You have to admire 'em for that."

Detroit's Frank Tanana winless in his last seven starts, failed to survive the first inning, Boston's Al Nipper lasted only 21/2 innings.
Dwight Evans drove in Boston's first run, in the first inning, with a sacrifice fly. After Jim Rice walker to reloaded the bases, Benzinger hit a 1-1 pitch into the lower deck in left for Boston's club record-tying ninth grand slam this season.

His looks like it picks up figured, Til lean out over the plate on this one speed as it comes to the plate."

Ryan can't explain any of this, or why there are so lew truly hard throwers around these days. "I remember when I went to Mets camp, there were five or six guys who threw in the low 10s." -ine said. "Seaver, Keedman, Gentry, Now thereare only five or six in the league. Now, if you go over 90 you're considered a hard thrower, even if you only do it two or three times a game." The speed is a nice gimmick, but Ryan is now recognized as a great plucher, and at 40 he is having what might be the best season of his life. His 1987 strikeouts-to-innings ratio, already the highest in major league history for his career, is higher than it's ever been. He leads the major leagues in strikeouts, despite a 100-pitch curfew (now 125) imposed on him by manager Hal Lanier, He has the National League's third owest earned run average. His record is 8-14, which will take him out of the Cy Young running, but it shouldn't, Hasn't Ryan suffered enough for the Astros' lack of punch?

Ryan, an honest man, said that he would vote for himself, because "I think I've been as consistent a pitcher as anyone in the league. Won-lost records seems to be the deciding factor on how effective you are" in the minds of award voters, "but i don't think anyone in the league has been more effective than I've been this year." Voting Ryan the Cy Young Award this season would be no gift, no sentimental Lifetime Achievement Award. Just because he's the greatest strikeout pitcher in history, and one of seball's nicest people, is no reason to vote mathe award if he continues to pitch as he as, he should win on ment.

He won't, of course. But is it too much to ask that the amazing, blazing, hair-raising, hyperphasing Nolan Ryan be voted a Cy Young Award once every 20 years?

To Union Change

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - A week before its scheduled strike, the National Football League Players Association moved away Tuesday from its demand for unlimited free agency. The change, along with other modifications the union considcred significant, appeared to have no immediate effect on the Management Council, the owners' negotiating group. After only a 25-minute meeting Tuesday, the three lawyers for the council "snapped their briefcases shut and left the room," according to Mick Luckhurst, the Atlanta Falcons' placekicker, who is a member of the union's executive committee. After leaving, the council's executive director, Jack Donlan, said: "I have a strong preference not to say anything right now because I'm afraid I'd say the wrong thing." The union has called for a strike, if there is no new contract, next Tuesday following the Monday night game between the New York Jets and LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Two sprinters' duels provided sparks on and off the track at an international meet Tuesday night. Greg Foster, looking fresh at the finish of a tough season, ran the year's fastest 110-meter hurdles, 13.17 seconds, and moments later taunted the runner-up, fellow American Toni Campbell, by shaking his index finger and chanting: "Who's No. 1?"

Campbell had won the overall and 110-hur-dles Grand Prix titles in Brussels last Friday, then complained that he had been left off the U.S. team that competed in the World Track and Field Championships in Rome, where Foster won the 110 hurdles.

Another highlight at Lausanne's Olympic stadium was Carl Lewis's 200-meter dash victory in 20.02 seconds, .14 seconds faster than Calvin Smith's gold-medal time at Rome. Lewis powered out of the turn to outdistance Gilles Quencherve of France, the Rome silver medalist, by nearly two yards.

The 100-meter world record-holder, Ben Johnson of Canada, drew whistles and jeers from 19,000 spectators before and after a highly unusual 60-meter outdoor dash. Johnson had asked for the race in order to avoid competing at 100 meters against Lewis, his American archrival and the 1984 Olympic champion. Johnson, who won the 60, said, "I'm not

Solving Airline Delays

WASHINGTON — The Defrom each airline were tardy to-day?" has come up with a dandy solution to the disastrous air transportation problem. Because of so many complaints from the public it has ordered the airlines to list all their flight delays, and report the losses of and damage to luggage. These figures will be made available to travelers so they can decide which is the best carrier to fly.

Soviet Union are planning their first joint movie, a comedy about the misadventures of a oon-Jewish Soviet citizen who emigrates to the Jewish state, an Israeli filmmaker said Wednesday.

"It's a funny film that makes jokes about the bureaucracies of both countries," Yitzhak Kol said. "America warmed up to China through ping pong. Maybe we are starting with the script of a movie."

Kol, the president of G.G. Israel Studios Jerusalem, said the idea was born five months ago when Israeli-born Meoahem Golao, president of Cannoo Films, visited the Soviet Unioo for a film festival.

Ties between the two countries were severed after the 1967 Middle East war, but have improved since Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to power in March 1985.

The knowledge of a late flight schedule can help you decide when to get to the airport. For example, if the plane takes off two hours late, you can use the time to do something exciting in Albany."

"That's great thinking. It's oo wooder you were the people who thought up a way to bust up the air controllers' union.'

"We're serious administrators," he said. "The department is going to fine every airline company $1,000 for failing to report that they were late."

"That fine should break most airlines," I agreed. "Can we talk about luggage? Suppose an airline confesses is bas an excellent record on flight arrivals, but a dismal one handling huggage. How do I deal with that?

"We advise people to take the flight but leave their luggage be-hind. On the other hand, if the carrier has a poor flying record but good baggage handling, we advise the passengers to send their luggage on it and board a plane that leaves at another time

She started as Suzanne Mahoney, one of four children of a medical secretary and a gardener in San Bruno, California -- a not altogether idyllic childhood, as she reveals in "Keeping Secrets." She does not want to talk about it but she says it is "a brutal account about being the child of a alcoholic. It's oot about being a star."

on Friday night to be on the 'Tonight Show.' And I thought it was because they loved my poetry. saw that I was the blonde in the Thunderbird in 'American Graffiti.' And oo one had ever known who that blonde was. So that was my iotroduction to televisioo." For a time, she says, she was virtually living off Carson's $320 fees. After she had been on the program dozens of times, ABC's theo-programming head. Fred Silverman, took note and thought that when the right project came up, be would use ber.

The right project, in March 1977, was a limited spring series based on a British program called "Man About the House." The American version was "Three's Company," which still runs and reruns. Adjectives like "smutty" regularly were attached to it.

The premise was that a young man shared an apartment with two women: the practical, conventional Janet, played by Joyce DeWitt, and the dizzy, shapely Chrissy Snow, played by Somers. By the time the show returned in the fall, it had become a national sensation and something of a scandal. "It really was a great thing to do, playing that kind of naive, innocent, pure character," she says of the Chrissy, whom critics saw as anything but.

When, seven years ago, Somers asked for a raise from $30,000 an episode to $150,000 as well as a piece of the earnings, the produc-ers resisted. So the last four years of the show were Chrissy-less.

"As I look back on it," she says, "everything about it was positive and wonderful and it gave me the visibility one needs to move on." she says. "But I did oot leave 'Three's Company' in a way that, as I lonk back on it now, that I would have. It was, everybody

> "I didn't know what I had." "She's the Sheriff" is something of a respite for Somers, who has the road and ended op putting on the beaded dress and doing her Las Vegas act 600 times. And while doing that, she wrote "Keeping Secrets."
> "Touch Me" is in its third printing. "One year I sold more poetry than Rod McKuen," she says, oot minding the implied literary comparison. "It's very lowkey market, so that you don't go around saying, 'I was a best-sell-ing poet of 19-whatever,' but I

you want to get rich," she says.
"Poetry just sort of comes out of you, and it comes out of me when I'm in pain. I haven't written a lot of poetry lately 'cause I'm not in much pain. In the thirties, I'm fiodiog the overall picture is clearing. And I'm getting near the end of the thirties. The forties are supposed to be even better than that. So I'll let you know."

Heading into her 40s, she and her husband live in an adobe house 17 miles from Las Vegas. She talks about getting into movies, but not with much urgency, and she wants to slow down: "I'm starting to get interested in the time off. To think, I find I'm sometimes ton husy to think." She has, after all, been busy in several ways since the birth of her soo Bruce, who is oow in college. "You know," she says, "when you're in the public eye, and I've certainly been, for want of a better word, the butt of many jokes, Johnny Carson's monologues for years. And I found myself using Gary Hart when I was doing monologues on 'The Late Show.

And after I did it, I thought, aw, I feel sorry for Gary Hart, that I was using him for fodder. And I thought, hey, that's what comes with the territory when you're in the public eye. I've been through it myself and he's been through it and you've got to take it. You've

Movie Autobiographies Have a Role for Reagan Ronald Reagan figures in a lot of the contract of the contract

Ronald Reagan figures in a lot of movie-star autobiographies. The actress Patricia Neal includes the president in her still-unitited book due ont in the spring. Neal made ber first movie. "John Loves Mary." with Reagan in 1948 in London. He was, she writes, reductantly being divorced from Jane Wynnan, and Neal was having an affair with Gary Cooper, with whom she made her second film that year. "The Fountainhead" Because of food shortages, Reagan had steaks flown in from the 21 Club in New York to eat at the Club in New York to eat at the Savoy Hotel, where the film crew was housed. Neal says that one night Reagan called the kitchen for his steaks and was told they were all gone. He knew better, but, she writes, it was "typical of the man" to say that, since meat was still rationed, he didn't mind sharing.
